

Culinary Journey with Dewa and Jero

Keliki - Bali

Embark on an amazing food and cultural journey with Dewa and Jero, who live with their children and extended family in the village of Keliki, an artist village nestled in the terraced foothills just north of Ubud.

Dewa works as a tour guide and is passionate about sharing the culture of Bali. He and his wife serve delicious Balinese food that promotes good health and spiritual well-being. Your experience will start with a walk around Dewa's family compound where Dewa will give you some insight into the Balinese culture and how they live. You will then join his wife and extended family in the kitchen and help them cook a range of Balinese dishes, using local ingredients and spices, over a traditional wood-fired oven. Your cooking class will finish with a delicious meal served at a dining area adjacent to the family temple. However, the family will not share the meal with you, because the Balinese believe you should never eat together as a family. The idea is that when you sit down to eat you are hungry after a long day's work and consequently have negative energy. However, they will be with you for the dessert portion of the experience.
