

Four-wheel Drive Safari into Myanmar's Dry Zone

Bagan

An adventure trip to remote dry zone with learning about small family workshops and daily activities is a perfect combination to capture pics.

Meet our guide at your hotel in the morning for an adventure into Central Myanmar's Dry Zone, which receives only limited rain compared to the rest of the country. Approximately one-quarter of the country's population live in this area. Traveling by four-wheel drive vehicle, you first head for Nyaung Gyi village to see a blacksmith's workshop and watch him at work. On the way you pass many local people going about their daily activities – local women carrying bundles of firewood on their backs, slow-moving ox carts and village roadside markets bustling with people. In Se Ywa village you visit several fascinating small-industry workshops, ranging from cooking oil production to wooden slipper making. You then
